

22nd April 2008

Latitude add a whole lot more

17/07/2008 - 20/07/2008 Henham Park Estate

Latitude have announced a whole new tranche of entertainment all headed for Henham Park, Southwold, Suffolk, on 17-20th July

Theatre Arena

Latitude Festival in partnership with London's Arcola Theatre are extremely excited to announce the greening of this years Theatre Arena. This will be the world's first fuel cell powered festival stage. Arcola will be providing state of the art low energy LED lighting and a Hydrogen Fuel Cell to power the stage. The fuel cell operates almost silently and will produce nothing but electricity and clean water. Arcola Theatre is a converted factory in East London and one of the UK's leading independent venues. This partnership with Latitude is part of Arcola Theatre's extensive range of sustainability activities, collectively referred to as the Arcola Energy project which in partnership with the Greening London Theatre Initiative is driving the eco-cultural frontier.

The Theatre Arena at Latitude is a buzzing hotbed of creativity and inspiration, hosting a wealth of bespoke productions and performances exclusive to the festival. Bringing some of the biggest names in contemporary, physical, classical, performance and local theatre to the Suffolk coast; the Theatre Arena really has something for everyone, provoking thought, emotions, laughs and entertainment all weekend long.

<http://www.safeconcerts.com/newsitem.asp?searchtext=arcola%20theatre&searchdate=&match=exact&od=&all=&nurn=1344>